Resource: Introduction to Advocate

As a Student Leader, an important part of your position will be to respond to various situations in your community. These situations might include an intoxicated student, a student with a mental health concern, a noisy room, etc.

It is your responsibility to respond to these situations and document everything. This includes things you see, hear and smell. The information that you document and submit to your CD/GSA is called an incident report.

- You will submit a report for all policy violations.
- You will submit a community or resident concern through Roompack. These situations aren't policy violations, but rather something important that your CD/GSA needs to be aware of or a detail that helps contribute to our overall picture of a student's experience
 - This includes situations such as a mental health concern, the death of a resident's family member, an eating disorder, a water pipe bursts on the 3rd floor of your building, etc.

Through this section we will provide you with important tips and things to remember to write an informative incident report and examples of what your CD/GSA is looking for. The incident reports you submit are extremely important to the CD/GSAs. We use this information in a variety of ways through follow-up conversations and conduct meetings.
